Work itself is a very important factor in motivating a person. A person tends to perform a task more enthusiastically if that work affords more satisfaction than the other work. A person's satisfaction out of work is more if it is more need-satisfying. A man seeks something from work and if he gets more satisfaction from a particular work, he will be prone to do that work better or harder. There are incentives for work; these can be financial or non - financial. People like missionaries and some scientists do not work basically for material gains as such. A person wants to do a work which is personally meaningful.
